

Cultural Collaborations: A Resource Guide For Teachers & Administrators

Recovery School District

Welcome to the first Recovery School District's Cultural Collaborations: A Resource Guide for Teachers & Administrators! The purpose of this guide is to encourage partnerships between the community, public and private organizations, teachers, administrators, students, and families. The goal, of course, is to provide students with rich learning opportunities that reinforce and enhance classroom learning.

Within this guide, you will find full page descriptions of each cultural provider's services. Each listing contains contact information, the organization's hours of operation, activity requirements, and alignment with content standards, benchmarks, and GLEs.

Following the alphabetical listing of providers, you will discover two pages of tables entitled At-a-Glance Listing. These tables summarize the features, educator opportunities, and student opportunities of all cultural providers in a quick reference format.

Finally, we have provided you with a copy of the most recent RSD Field Trip Proposal Form and Field Trip Bussing Form.

We hope that this guide will encourage you to plan field trips, assemblies, and workshops to help students discover and master content through exciting, hands-on experiences. The providers in this guide have expressed their desire and commitment to help the students of New Orleans become better educated citizens. They encourage you to plan trips throughout the year, so they can work with you to target those skills students need to demonstrate on state-wide assessments.

Good luck and remember...the world is your classroom!

Newcomb Art Gallery, Tulane University Provider Services Overview

Address:	Woldenberg Art Center
	New Orleans, LA 70118
Educational contact person:	Shelley Boles
Contact person's phone number:	504.865.5361
Contact person's email:	sboles@tulane.edu
Organization/provider website:	www.newcombartgallery.com
Description of organization and services:	Through the education program, the Newcomb Art Gallery continues to provide the structure to examine works of art, explore other cultures and history, embrace creativity, and open a dialogue on issues and ideas central to the human experience for audiences of all ages. The program includes both school and community components with its primary focus on the integration of visual arts into schools to enrich quality of life and learning. Because the Newcomb Art Gallery is a smaller institution which features only one or two exhibitions at a time, it is well suited to work individually with teachers to carefully tailor each tour and every school program to the specific needs of teachers and students alike. School children who visit the museum will simultaneously visit a college campus. Such exposure opens doors and possibilities for many students. In addition, the gallery also has immediate access to Newcomb Art Department faculty and art studios, which enables the incorporation of artistic demonstrations into our programs. This ultimately increases the visitor's understanding of the process and makes the creation of work more tangible and accessible. Furthermore, the Newcomb Art Gallery is free and open to the public, so there is no fee for educational programs. There is often funding for buses available through donations from Newcomb alumni and gallery members. The gallery offers an ever-widening list of resources that includes staff and docent-led interactive gallery tours, hands-on art activities, school presentations (both pre- and post-visit), themed tours, multi-visit programs and artist and Tulane student presentations when applicable. The gallery intends to add a student-led docent program for 7-12 grades.

Grade level expectations (GLEs) and/or content standards and benchmarks to be addressed:	The gallery is open and flexible to accommodating any criteria that needs to be met by school groups. Each exhibition may better serve different areas of study.

Description of organization and services:	The U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service is the principal agency responsible for conserving, protecting, and enhancing fish wildlife and plants and their habitats for the continuing benefit of the American people. As part of the Southeast Louisiana Refuges Complex, the Environmental Education and Outreach Department offers on-site and in -class programs which focus on wetlands education and ecology and the vital importance of wetlands to our survival, and the survival of myriad flora and fauna. Bayou Sauvage National Wildlife Refuge is currently undergoing major restoration projects as a result of being significantly impacted by Hurricane Katrina. As a result, our programs are in the process of being adapted accordingly, and the content, as well as names of the programs are subject to change as the refuge continues to undergo transformation.
